Be it Remembered, That at a Court of Common Pleas, held at Philadelphia, for the City and County of Philadelphia, on the twenty-seventh day of April, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, the foregoing Instrument of Writing, being the Articles of Incorporation of "CRITTENDEN'S PHILADELPHIA COMMERCIAL COLLEGE," was presented to the said Court on behalf of the persons therein named, in order that they might be incorporated according to Law and according to the objects, articles and conditions therein set forth and contained. WHEREUPON, the said Court having perused and examined the said Instrument of Writing, and the objects, articles and conditions therein set forth and contained, appearing to be lawful and not injurious to the community, ordered and directed the same to be filed in the office of the Prothonotary of the said Court, and that the due notice of said application be published according to law. ### LOCATION, ARRANGEMENTS, &c.

The location of the College, which is now in the 13th year of its existence, is one of the most eligible for the purpose of any in the city; being in a very central position, in the portion of the city where most business is done, and consequently more convenient to those who need to attend such an institution.

Both the second and third stories of the building, are occupied; and are fitted up in a manner combining taste, comfort, and convenience, to a degree seldom found in similar institutions.

On the second floor, the apartments are;—a neatly furnished Reception room, an Office for the transaction of the business of the College, a Hat room, and the Main Hall for instruction in commercial knowledge. The latter room is eighty feet deep by twenty-six feet wide, and is beautifully furnished with counting house desks, arm chairs, &c., and divided into several separate apartments, by screens; so that the students have all the advantages of private rooms for instruction.

The third story is divided into, the Gentlemen's Writing Room, the Ladies' Apartments, with a dressing room adjoining, and the Accountant's Office. There is likewise a Stationery department connected with the College, from which students are furnished with all the requisites of the course, at wholesale prices.

The amount of room occupied, and the number of students in attendance, we are assured exceeds that of any other, exclusively Commercial, Institution in the United States.

The instruction given to students, though strictly individual in character, and given by different teachers, is still entirely under the direction and oversight of the Principal, who attends personally to all examinations, taking care to explain all difficult points, as only one who is experienced in teaching can.

We cordially invite all, to call, and examine our arrangements, mode of teaching, &c. in detail; feeling confident from former success, that we shall still be enabled to please a community, who have so liberally patronised the Institution from its first foundation.

BOOK-KEEPING.

The work used as a basis of instruction in this Branch, is CRITTENDEN'S BOOK-KEEPING, Counting House Edition, now more extensively circulated than any other similar work published in the United States; and of which more will be said hereafter.*

The method of teaching this science is such as to give each pupil all the advantages it is possible to derive from individual or private instruction, and lectures to classes, combined; no teaching being done in classes. But each pupil is required by himself, under the direction of skilful, and experienced Teachers, to write out and close up several different sets of books, adapted especially for WHOLESALE or RETAIL, JOBBING, IMPORTING, MANUFACTURING, COMMISSION, and COMPANY SPECULATING BUSINESS, also forms for FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC SHIPPING BUSINESS, and for WESTERN STEAMBOAT BOOKS. And then, at intervals of a few days, the pupils are critically examined by the principal, and none are allowed to proceed until found to understand thoroughly the points over which they have passed.

COMMERCIAL CALCULATIONS.

This branch of knowledge, so important to every business man, and one which is so likely to be neglected in primary schools, is thoroughly taught in its relation to EQUATION, or AVERAGING ACCOUNTS, INTEREST, DISCOUNTS, EXCHANGES, ARBITRATION OF EXCHANGE, &c., &c.

COMMERCIAL FORMS.

Each pupil, in pursuing his course of study, is exercised in making out in proper form, all the various Accounts Current, Account Sales, Bills of Exchange, Invoices, Drafts, Promissory Notes, &c., &c., necessary for business, as well as in the most simple and concise forms of Commercial Correspondence.

PENMANSHIP.

The charge of the Writing Department of the College has been intrusted to the hands of a tried and skilful teacher, and one who by devoting his whole time and attention to this branch of instruction, will spare no pains in making his pupils perfect in the art.

Particular attention will also be paid by him to filling out Diplomas for Societies, Marriage Certificates, Title Pages, Visiting Cards, &c.

Lectures will also be delivered by him to the pupils, from time to time, in explanation of the system taught; illustrated by examples on the blackboard.

Every one is ready to admit that the acquisition of a rapid, and elegant, business hand-writing, is one of the first requisites of a commercial education. Indeed, no person should think himself competent to perform the duties of an accountant, until he has first acquired a style of writing, which combines neatness of form, rapidity, and legibility.

The system of Writing taught here, is one calculated to give freedom of motion to the hand, and an easy form to the characters; while, at the same time, great care is taken to attain all these qualities.

LECTURES ON COMMERCIAL LAW, &c.

This feature of the Institution which has been received with so much favour by the community in general, will still be continued at intervals. During the last season all the students of the College had free tickets to the course of lectures before the Mercantile Library Association, of this city, delivered by some of the most distinguished, literary, and scientific gentlemen in the country.

The course of Lectures which were delivered before the students of the college by his Honour JUDGE SHARSWOOD, during the winter of 1855-6, have been published in a neat book of 240 pages, which is for sale at the College, and by Booksellers generally.

This Book comprises a complete manual for general use of the most commonly required information in regard to laws pertaining to business transactions; such as Contracts of Partnerships, and of Sales, Duties and Liabilities of Agents or Factors, Common Carriers, &c.

TIME OF COMMENCING STUDIES.

Applicants may enter upon their course of study at any time, as no teaching is done in classes, and may devote any portion of their time which best suits their convenience.

NECESSARY PREPARATION.

It is only necessary for the pupil to understand the ordinary English branches, to be qualified to enter upon the course.

TIME REQUIRED FOR COMPLETION.

At this institution no inducements are held out to pupils in any department of study, that within a specified time, or set number of lessons, they shall have become proficient. But with diligence and perseverance, suiting the time to the person, success is certain. The time required for a complete course of instruction varies, usually from eight to twelve weeks.

Still, as it is all important that every agreement should have a definite termination, the time allowed for completing a course, will always be limited to six months from the date of commencement, unless a special arrangement for prolonging it, is made with the Principal.

GRADUATION, DIPLOMA, &C.

Pupils, who upon examination, are found fully competent to act as Book-Keepers, will receive a Diploma, with the seal of the Institution attached. This will serve as a recommendation to any position they may be required to fill among the mercantile community, to whom this establishment is so well and favourably known.

MONEY, BOARD, &C.

Parents, or Guardians, at a distance from the city, may deposit funds for the use of students, with the Principal, who will receipt therefor, and supply them at such times, and in such sums as may be requested.

He will also assist those who are strangers in the city, to obtain suitable boarding places.

Department of Public Accountant.

This portion of the institution has received very liberal patronage from its first establishment.

Arrangements have now been completed by which Merchants, Executors or Administrators of Estates, Agents, or others desiring to have difficult or complicated accounts arranged, Books opened or closed, or other similar services performed, may have them done under the immediate eye of the principal, and may therefore rely upon precision and accuracy in their execution, while the charges will be moderate and proportioned to the amount of skill and labour required.

It is needless to say to any intelligent person, that the knowledge and experience requisite for success in this department must necessarily be much greater than is demanded for any other task in the routine of Counting House duties.

To this department the especial care, and attention of the principal has been, and will be devoted, and he refers with pleasure to numerous parties who have received his assistance, as a guarantee of satisfaction to those who may need it hereafter.

Copying, Engrossing on Parchment, Inscriptions in Books, Filling up Certificates, &c., and all kinds of Business and Ornamental Writing, done with fidelity and despatch.

The Terms for plain copying are ten cents for every one hundred words.

Department of Modern Languages.

In this department the services of a gentleman widely known and justly celebrated for his talents, have been secured. Every young man entering upon business, (and more especially in this country, where there are so many representatives of other nations,) should have a knowledge of those languages most commonly used, among different nations at the present day.

All will concede this; and it is therefore with especial pleasure that we announce the establishment of this additional branch of instruction, feeling confident that all will find satisfaction both from the ability of the teacher and his method of teaching.

Hours of Instruction.

The YEAR is divided into TWO SESSIONS, as follows;

THE FIRST: From APRIL 21st, to SEPTEMBER 15th; During which period the hours of instruction are, from 9 A. M., to 1 P. M., and from 3 P. M. to 7 P. M.

Opinions of the Press.

We insert below only a few of the complimentary notices given us by different and leading papers.

From the "Pennsylvania Inquirer" of Oct. 26, 1856.

An excellent Institution—Crittenden's Philadelphia Commercial College.

We yesterday, on invitation, visited the halls of this Institution, situated on the S. E. corner of Seventh and Chestnut Sts., and were much surprised at the large number of students who are attending upon the instructions of Mr. Crittenden and his able assistants and professors. The Institution was founded by Mr. Crittenden in the early fall of 1844, and rapidly increased in reputation and number of students, until it was deemed expedient, over a year ago, to have it incorporated into a College, with a perpetual charter, for the purpose of giving a full course of commercial instruction. When the Institute, as it was then called, was removed to its present quarters, it was thought that the room would be sufficient for many years to come, but the increase of students has been so great, as to agreeably disappoint its warmest friends. The apartments are thus divided: The visitor enters an elegantly furnished reception room for the use of instructors and pupils who may be waited upon by their friends. This opens into the office or business quarters of the Institution. The main hall for instruction in book-keeping and general commercial knowledge, joins these two rooms, and contains accommodations for over sixty students. By an ingenious arrangement of screens, the hall is divided into many compartments, which obviates the distraction from study incident to so large a number of pupils. The size of this room is twenty-six feet front and eighty feet deep. On the third floor the front apartment is used as a gentlemen's writing department, under the especial care of Prof. Thos. W. Moore, the most accomplished penman in this city. Adjoining it is a private apartment devoted exclusively to the ladies, under the especial charge of an able instructress. There is connected with the lady's department a handsome dressing-room. In the rear of this is a private accountants' room, for the settlement of difficult or complicated accounts. There is also a stationery room, where articles are furnished at the wholesale price.

The Commercial College is still increasing; it now is the largest Institution of the kind in the Union, and we may soon expect to hear of its having the various modern languages taught in addition to the present branches so ably imparted. The Instructors are:—Messrs. S. H. Crittenden, Principal; Thos. W. Moore, Professor of Plain and Ornamental Penmanship; B. Frank Moore, and George M. Thrasher, Professors of the Science of Accounts and Commercial Calculations. Mrs. C. W. Lundy, Instructress in Ladies' Department; Hon. George Sharswood, LL. D., Lecturer on Commercial Law and the duties of business men.

The Trustees consist of many of our most eminent bankers, merchants, and members of the bar. The list of graduates numbers over sixteen hundred, of whom over three hundred graduated last year; and in that list, during the twelve years of its existence, are enrolled the names of many active and prominent merchants, who received here their first knowledge of business principles. The many advantages of this Institution are, that it gives at a small comparative expense, the knowledge which years of toil could only otherwise give. The terms for the complete course of instruction, including all the branches taught, are $35.

A handsome copy of Judge Sharswood's able lectures is presented to each pupil on his graduation. There is no teaching in classes, so that the pupils can commence at any time.

Mr. Crittenden's ability as an instructor needs no word of commendation from us. His great and continued success, and the strong attachment of his many pupils, are strong evidences of the accomplished instructor.

From the "Delaware State Journal," Wilmington, Oct. 28, 1856.

We take great pleasure in laying before the readers of the Journal the following handsome notice of Crittenden's Commercial College, from the Pennsylvania Inquirer of Saturday. This Institution, we believe, has no equal in this country; and the rapid advances it has made in public favour since its foundation, show how greatly such a college was needed by the commercial interests of the city. Mr. Crittenden deserves all the rare success he has met with, because of his persevering industry and talent. In the Inquirer's notice, we observe a handsome compliment paid to our former fellow-townsmen, Thomas W. Moore, whom the editor very justly styles, "the most accomplished penman in the City." Mr. Moore's skill and proficiency in plain and ornamental penmanship may well draw forth such a tribute from one of the ablest editorial minds of Pennsylvania. He is a valuable acquisition to any institution, but more particularly so to one like Crittenden's.

(Then follows same as above.)

From the Phila. "Evening Journal," Oct. 28, 1856.

Crittenden's Philadelphia Commercial College.

This Institution, which is now chartered, and numbers among its Trustees some of the most widely known and honoured of our citizens, is now in the twelfth year of its existence. From a small beginning it has grown with our city, and ranks among our prominent educational institutions. The last yearly catalogue of students, now before us, shows a list of two hundred and ninety-four persons, from April 15th, 1855, to April 15th, 1856. The system of instruction pursued is quite a novelty in its way. The pupil is not confined to the routine of class studies, nor has he a lesson of fixed length; but each one has entirely individual instruction from attentive and able teachers. The interior arrangements of the College are worthy of a visit from all the friends of education. Occupying both the second and third stories, the rooms are divided and arranged in the most commodious manner. On the first floor is the reception room, office, hat room, and main hall for instruction in commercial knowledge. This latter has the air of an immense counting-room, or, rather, series of counting-rooms, being separated into several different apartments by screens. Each apartment is furnished with desks, arm chairs, and every other requisite.

The third story is divided into four commodious rooms, namely—gentlemen's writing room, ladies' apartment and dressing room, and accountant's room. The writing department is under the care of Mr. T. W. Moore, who is one of the most skilful penmen in the country, and unites with this expertness the rare tact of imparting the same art with facility to his pupils. The ladies also have the advantage of a lady teacher of undoubted ability.

Of the merits of the Principal of the Institution it is needless for us to speak; the hundreds of our best business men who have acquired from his hands their knowledge of accounts, is sufficient attestation of his qualifications. Another very important item in connexion with the course of instruction at this place, is the knowledge of commercial law which is imparted in the lectures delivered from time to time. Those delivered last season, by his Honour, Judge Sharswood, have been published in a neat volume, which is presented to all graduates of the College.

From the Phila. "Evening Bulletin," Oct. 29, 1856.

The Annual Catalogue of this Institution is now before us, and shows a list of two hundred and ninety-four students, during the year ending April 15th, 1856.

Among the Board of Trustees we observe the names of several of our most respected citizens. The College was incorporated by a perpetual charter, on June 4th, 1855, and now ranks among our prominent literary institutions.

Mr. Crittenden, the Principal, has been known among our community for years, and hundreds of our best business men have received their business knowledge from him. There are also engaged with him an able corps of professors, including one of the best penmen in the country, and an accomplished lady instructress in the ladies' department.

The College occupies the whole of the second and third stories of the building at the S. E. corner of Seventh and Chestnut Streets, and the interior arrangements are very complete, combining elegance and taste, with convenience and utility. It is worth a visit from all the friends of education.

From "The Sun," February 11, 1857.

We direct the attention of our readers this morning to this superior establishment, at the corner of Seventh and Chestnut Streets. Mr. Crittenden has obtained a world-wide renown, as the most successful teacher of the science of Penmanship, Book-keeping, Commercial Laws and Forms, Commercial calculations, &c., and all who wish to obtain a thorough knowledge of these important branches, should lose no time in taking a complete course of instruction.

---

From the "North American and U. S. Gazette," Oct. 30, 1856.

COMMERCIAL EDUCATION.—We desire to direct the attention of all who are interested in the cause of education, to an institution, from which hundreds of the best business men, in this and neighbouring cities, have obtained their knowledge of Counting House duties. The Catalogue of Crittenden's Phila. Commercial College is before us, and shows a list of two hundred and ninety-four students during one year, from April 15th, 1855, to April 15th, 1856.

The reputation of the Principal of the College is so wide-spread, and the number of graduates from it so great, that it is unnecessary for us to do more than allude to the fact that all who know anything of the institution, unite in declaring, that the mode of instruction is better adapted to the purpose; and the training in useful forms for active business more thorough than that of any similar establishment in this section of the country.

The College occupies both the second and third stories of the spacious building, S. E. corner of Seventh and Chestnut Streets, and in the interior arrangements combine elegance with comfort, and usefulness, to a degree which is worthy the attention of the friends of education.

From the "Phila. Morning Times," Oct. 25, 1856.

We desire to direct the attention of the friends of education, to the opportunity afforded at Crittenden's Phila. Commercial College, for young men to acquire a knowledge of all the duties of the counting room more thoroughly, and in a much shorter space of time, than in the regular routine of business.

Mr. C. has established a wide-spread reputation in his business, and a diploma from this institution has become almost an indispensable requisite for procuring a situation in many of the best business houses in this city.

A Practical Treatise on Book-Keeping,

BY S. W. CRITTENDEN.

---

E. C. & J. BIDDLE, No. 8 Minor Street, Philadelphia, Publishers.

---

The following opinion of many of the best practical accountants in our country—relative to the last edition of Mr. Crittenden's Inductive and Practical Treatise—from the character of these gentlemen, and the high standing of the commercial, banking, and other establishments which they represent is, we feel assured, as strong testimony to the merits of the series as can be presented, and we therefore append it alone.

Opinion of Practical Accountants.

WE, the undersigned, have carefully examined "An Inductive and Practical Treatise on Book-Keeping by Single and Double Entry," by S. W. Crittenden, Accountant, and are free to bestow upon it our unqualified commendation. It is well suited for a text-book for the teacher, a guide for the learner, and a book of reference for the practical accountant.

The elementary portion is simple, clear, comprehensive, and so gradually progressive that each want and difficulty of the student appears to be successfully anticipated, while such definite and satisfactory reasons are given for each progressive step, as to furnish the basis for further advancement.

The questions for review which are interspersed through the work, afford to teachers a ready method of testing the amount of knowledge acquired by their pupils, while they serve to fix previous instructions more firmly in the mind.

But the chief excellence of the treatise consists, in our estimation, in its pre-eminently practical character; the author having obtained, from practical accountants, in some of the most systematic and best-regulated houses of our large cities, the various labour-saving methods which long experience had suggested for their adoption, and incorporated them with his own theory and practice, thereby furnishing the most advantageous forms of books for various kinds of business.

These PRACTICAL FORMS embrace two different methods of keeping books by Double Entry for Jobbing Houses—one for Foreign Shipping business, one for Commission Houses, one for an extensive, and one for a small Retail business, and a form for Professional Men or Mechanics, besides a fac simile of Western Steamboating business.

On the whole, we think this by far the most complete work we have examined on the subject.
